Liberal Democrats - working to protect our environment

Locally, nationally and internationally, the Liberal Democrats are campaigning to protect our environment. 'For the sake of all our futures we must work together to solve global problems,' says local Lib Dem Euro MP, Bill Newton Dunn.

Bill Newton Dunn (right) consults about environmental issues.

The Liberal Democrats have put environmental issues at the heart of their campaign for the elections to the European Parliament in June.

Bill has taken a leading role in pressing the United States to face up to its global responsibilities.

He has met with American Congressmen to urge the US government to sign up to Kyoto and to other international treaties.

Local action is vital too. More and more local councils in the East Midlands are run by the Liberal Democrats and they are working to boost recycling and cut waste.

Clegg's Green energy plea

Nick Clegg is backing EU measures to ensure one fifth of electricity is produced from 'green' sources by the year 2010.

Nick is one of our area's Lib Dem Euro-MPs. He is a member of the Energy Committee of the European Parliament. And he has spent many hours working to promote energy plants that are more efficient and less polluting.

Find out more about Nick's work as an MEP from his web-site: www.nickclegg.org.

EU ACTION

The European Union has put in place minimum standards on air pollution, water quality, vehicle emissions, waste management, noise levels and disposal of hazardous substances.

The EU eco-labelling scheme encourages the design and production of environment-friendly products.

The European Parliament has used its powers to make a real difference to environmental laws. You can find out more at www.europarl.org.uk.

Tick if you agree:

- Liberal Democrats would scrap car tax for the greenest vehicles and reduce tax for less-polluting cars and motorcycles.
- Lib Dems want to reopen British waterways for freight and promote a national network of Safe Routes for cycling or walking to school.
- The Party also wants to ensure doorstep recycling collection for every household, and reducing VAT on energy saving appliances.
